SUMMARY

Nominee Profile

Kuan-Chun Lee is a Principal Scientist in the Corporate Sustainability organization at Procter & Gamble based in Singapore. Kuan-Chun leads the technical sustainability strategy, priority and efforts on P&G's 3-pillar palm sustainability program on supply chain management, independent smallholder program and industry standard and approach development– playing a critical leadership role across all three pillars.

Kuan-Chun joined the RSPO Smallholder WG in 2014. Since then, he served in the 2018 RSPO P&C Review Task Force, the Smallholder Interim Group for RSPO Independent Smallholder Standard, Jurisdictional Approach WG, No Deforestation Task Force, No Deforestation Joint Steering Group, and in the Smallholder Standing Committee and Assurance Standing Committee after serving in the Board of Governors from November 2018.

Kuan-Chun received Ph.D. in Environmental Engineering from Northwestern University, U.S.A. He joined P&G at the Kobe Technical Center in Japan in 1999, before moved to Singapore in 2011. His responsibilities covered environmental risk assessment, sustainable innovation strategy and life cycle assessment (LCA) to improve environmental footprints on renewable materials, solid waste, and products, and led the P&G / WWF Water Stewardship Program in China. Professionally, he served as the President of the Society of Environmental Toxicology & Chemistry (SETAC) Asia-Pacific Geographic Unit in 2016-2018, and is currently member of the Industrial Advisory Board of the Nanyang Environment & Water Research Institute in Singapore.
